Mr. White Some of the present company of Mr. Ranns—I can thrash you in five minutes, or any of February and July and the parties to order, and desired Mr. Banks to proceed with his statement as to how his property would be affected by the continuance or removal of the Crystal Palace.

Mr. Ranks, recuming, said that his lots on Fortieth street were not worth hardly as much as they would be new, if the ground where the Crystal Palace stood had been converted into a park. If that scoundred there, he continued, (pointing to Mr. White,) had succeeded in getting the Crystal Palace into a cattle market his property would now, probably, have got to be worth little or nothing. Mr. B. referred at some length to the efforts of Mr. White to get a built through the Legislature to convert the Crystal Palace into a cattle market. He charged the whole proceeding as a sneaking and vidanous management.

Mr. Wurm, interrupting, stated that he had heard that some parties wished to remonstrate against the bill, and, herefore, though the bill had gone through some of the fages requiring its passage, he had the same referred sod, to give such parties an opportunity to be heard. ERESTING CASE AS TO THE CUSTODY OF A CHILD. MAY 8.—In the Case of Murphy vs Murphy.—Judge Roose-sit rendered a decision in this suit, which was an ap-

MAY 8.—In the Case of Murphy as Murphy—Judge Roosevolt readered a decision in this suit, which was an application for the custody of a child aged nine years, son at the sister of the respondent, and which the respondent chims to hold as an adopted child.

Roosever, J.—The child whose custody is disputed in this case, is an interesting boy nine years of age, whose life thus far has been spent with an aunt and uncle, as his adopted parents. Immediately on his birth—for he was only elaven weeks old—his father, and what is perhaps more importhant, his mother "gave him" as is admitted, reely and for the best reasons, and with the most commendable of motives to those who had ever since, with more, if possible, than mother's and father's soliditude, watched over his infancy, and to whom the lad himself saturally now clings with more than filst affection. The question is, shall they under these circummances and at this late period, after so many years of approving acquisecace, be now rudely torn asunder. No interest of the child demands the sacrifice. On the contrary, his education, his inclination, his prospects in life, all, as far as can now be seen or foreseen, will be best proported by his remaining with his adopted parents. Of their own once numerous family, all are dead except a helpless daughter. Their means are ampte, and their dispectition to apply them not disputed. They are not only willing but anxious to rear and provide for this child, in all respects as if he had sprang from their own sins. Nine years of reprovious and approvation have sufficiently established their sincerity and their ability. Have the natural parents, in such case, paramount legal claims? It seems to me they have not. The Court (asys Chancellor Kent, 2 Com. 185) will lovestigate the elements and an advance of the case appears to warrant it. The last Supreme Court (asys Chancellor Kent, 2 Com. 185) will lovestigate the elements and an advance of the case appears to warrant it. The last Supreme Court (as Johnson's Reports, 328) applied t jurisprudence that part performance creates an exception to the general rule. In this case there is not only part performance, but a most substantial part. Nine years, the earliest of the twenty-one, may be justly considered as more than half a child's minority. Having under the verbal gift performed a parent's duties for nine years, the uncle and aunt, especially when in accordance with the uncle and aunt, especially when in accordance with the whild's interests and inclinations, are entitled to parent? rights. Those who have borne the cares of the child's early infancy should enjey the comforts of his maturer years. Ordered that the demurrer to the return made to the writ of habeas corpus be overruled, and that the outlody of the child be adjudged to the defendants.

AMUSEMENTS -By referring to the usual directory, it will be observed that a great number of novelties are offorced for this evening's diversion at the various theatres and other places of accusement.

JACK ADAMS.

Pictorial Life and Adventures of Jack Adams, the celebrated muticeer and salor. By Captain Chunier, author of "The Spiffire." Full of illustrations. Price 50 cents.

Jack Adams a salor and muticeer, stands recorded in the neval history of Engand as the founder of a Christian colony of half-breeds on a historia uninhabited island in the selfude of the South Fas. The whole of the history of the crow of the Bounty is one of most painful import; but there is an intensity of interest in every portion of the story which equals that connected with the doings of Robinson Crusca is whose adventures the most jucicious benefit go fact and fansy is said to exist. Capitain Chemier has treated the facts with much force and success; and the relation of the outward voyage of the bounty, the or existing a fact of the cut ward to yage of the expelled capitals and his fathful friends, in a frail open boat, progress and outbreak of the muticy, and the voyage of the expelled capitals and his fathful friends, in a frail open boat, nearly four thou and miles across the Indian Ocean, are given with a power that enchains the attention of the reader. The wavering practices of the mutineers, after the completion of the corine, and the separation of the guilty saliors into two parties, with the agreet of the Ottabelian portion, and subsequent wretek of the Pandora frigate, are choice specimens of compestition. "Jack Adams" is a deligible work, and instances of nowerful writing are frequent in its pages—[Burton's Gentleman's Magazine.
